

How does playing with a pencil and paper affect creativity and therefore the well being of student/staff?

Social Justice

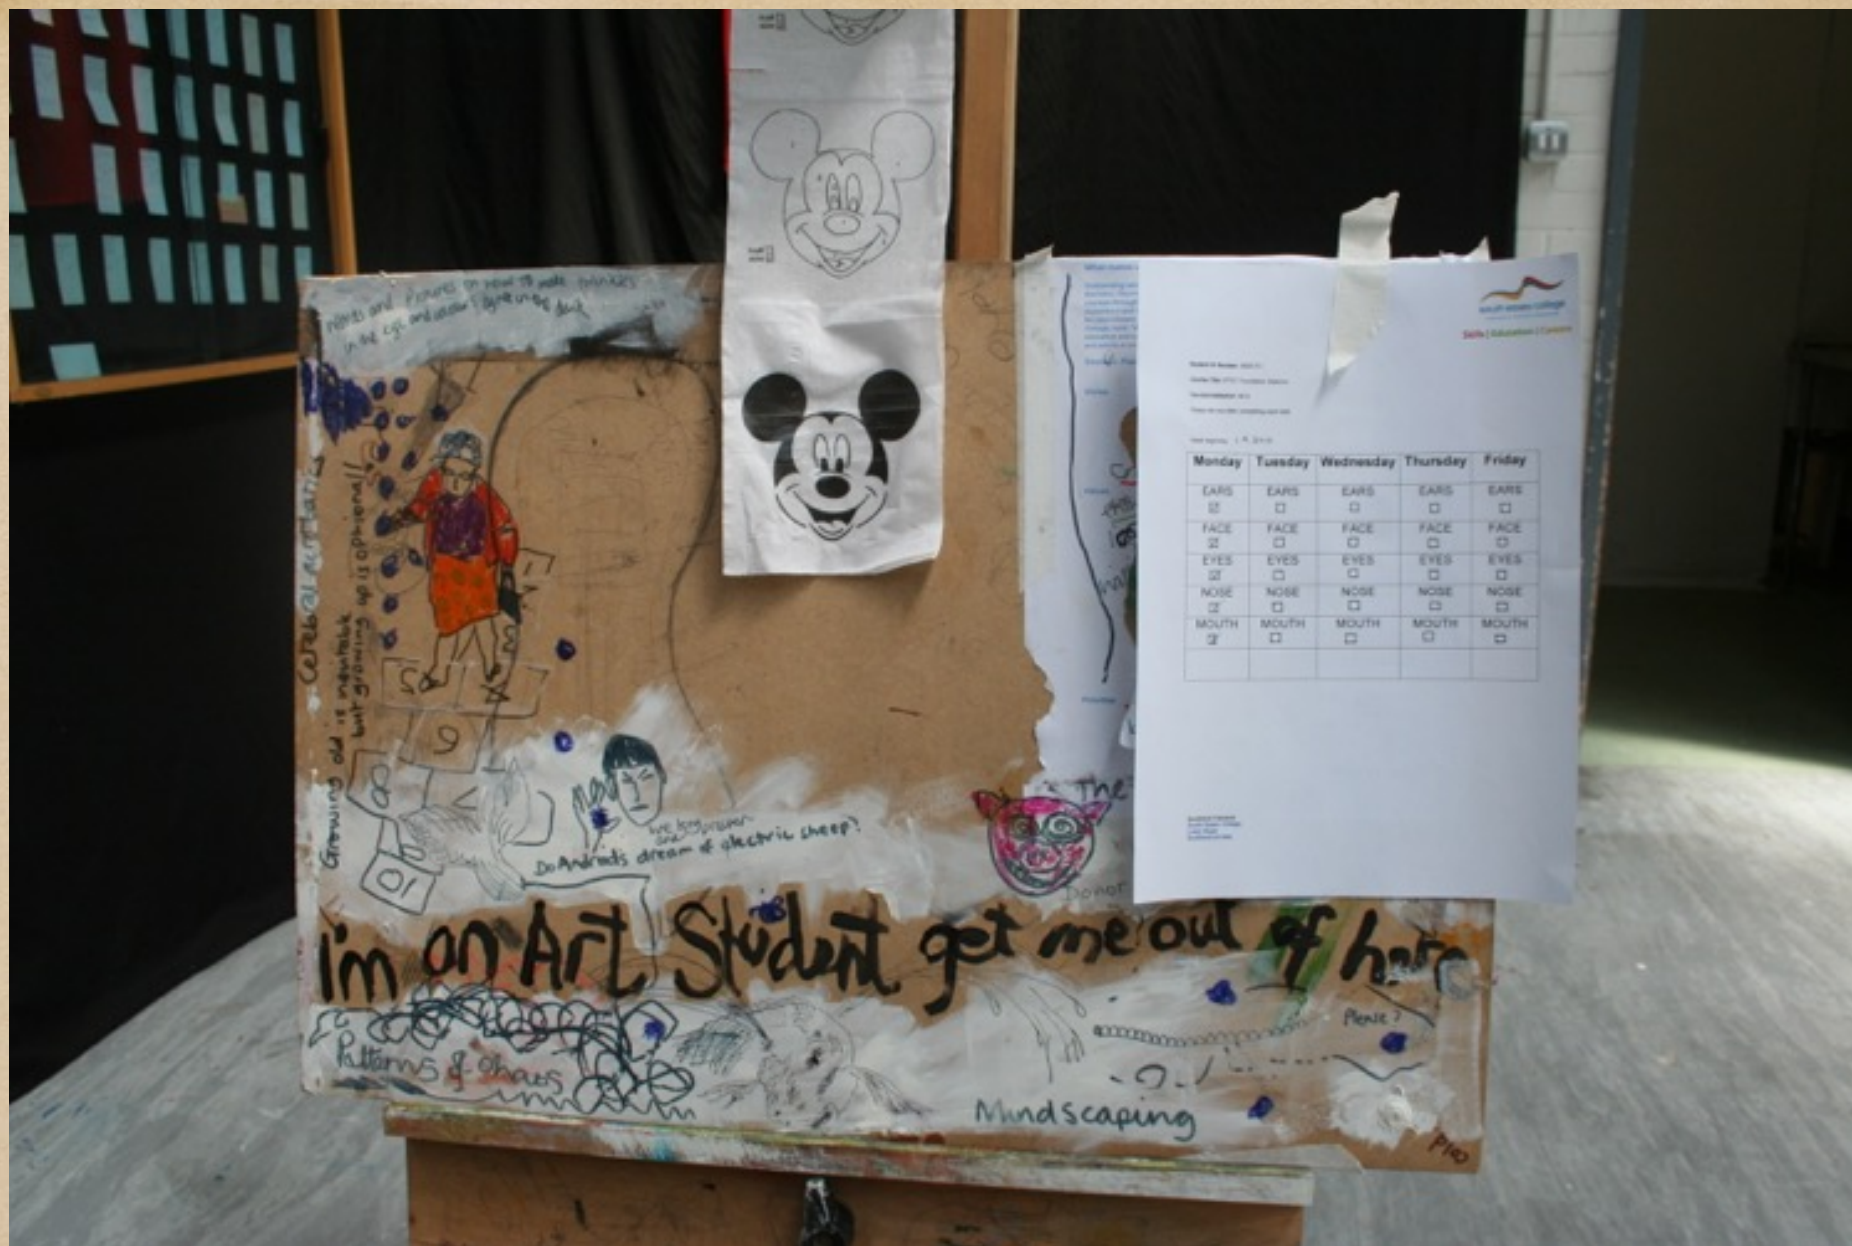

If Social Justice is equity in access to resources, participation, food, shelter and education, Martha Nussbaum adds the right to think and feel as a human right in her Capabilities approach. She advocates this through the right to creativity through working with our hands.

"Your emotions never seem in proportion to their objects, Azíz."

Azíz replies with,

"Is emotion a sack of potatoes, so much the pound, to be measured out? Am I a machine?"

My children do this but I've never thought to join in. It doesn't seem like work or serious so I think it's just childish. I love it.

They say its more sustainable not to cut down trees for paper and so there is less waste. I don't believe that. The rainforests are still attacked and trees grown for palm oil for cheap food. That impacts the environment far more. People in power always have answers for what they want to do.

We still waste paper through junk mail. Perhaps we should start making our own paper. We could even do that as a workshop.
